

Week 17 (2019)

The Other Red Eye

If you live in a country where spring has finally sprung you may also have had an unwelcome visitor, the dreaded Red Eye...from Allergies and Hay fever!

The worldwide rates of allergies such as hay fever are increasing so there's a good chance that you may have one or more of these symptoms....

- Coughing
- Stuffy and runny nose
- Wheezing
- Sore throat
- Itchy and sore eyes that may combine to also give you headaches

If you have got any of these...it's simply miserable!

I don't recommend long term use of drugs, such as anti-histamines, which are known for causing blurred vision, drowsiness, dry mouth and headaches. Almost the same symptoms as hay fever itself!

There is a better way than spending summer indoors or hoping for rain to avoid the symptoms.

Good Health Naturally has a surprise for you.

Millions have allergies to airborne triggers that cause symptoms of hay fever. Another 17 million have symptoms of asthma. Airborne allergies occur when exposure to a particular antigen (such as pollen, mold spores or animal dander) triggers the immune system to produce antibodies that in turn trigger the release of histamine and other inflammatory compounds from mast cells. is a natural substance that can offer immune supporting benefits without the ill effects when it is taken in therapeutic doses (3 Teaspoons over the day).

Vitamin C: The Natural Antihistamine

Vitamin C is a welcomed alternative. As a vitamin, it is essential that you obtain vitamin C from your food and supplements as your body does not make vitamin C. CureC is a potent antioxidant delivering liposomal vitamin C protects your cells from damage, reduces the severity of allergic reactions and helps your body to fight infections. When taken during allergy season, vitamin C can slow down the overreaction of your body to environmental triggers by decreasing your body's histamine production. Vitamin C is a natural antihistamine.

My last words on this...

Of course, I cannot finish without pointing out that this is a dysfunction of the immune system that's caused by a dysfunction of the digestive system. Stopping all grains and cereals (the evil ones) will help enormously. Why am I so sure? I have treated hundreds of hay fever sufferers over the years, using HealthPoint to give them instant relief and the only points I used were the digestive points Liv3 and S36 shown in the manual. If you have a HealthPoint, make sure to use it.
